

THE RHYTHM OF THE WEST

A Biohistory of the Modern Era AD 1600 to the Present

Michael A. Woodley, Aurelio J. Figueredo, Matthew A. Sarraf,
Steven C. Hertler, Heitor B. F. Fernandes, Mateo Peñaherrera-Aguirre

JSPES Monograph Volume 37, 2017

203pp., $48.00 + postage ISBN 978-1-878465-49-8

Is Western civilization generally progressing or declining? Optimists point to high levels of wealth and subjective well-being and low levels of poverty, crime, and mortality, alongside over a century of mostly sustained economic and cognitive growth — the latter reflected in the threepoint per decade increase in IQ test performance, known as the Flynn effect. But contemporary research indicates that in recent decades the Flynn effect has faltered and gone into reverse.

The Rhythm of the West offers a rigorous and empirically robust theory to elucidate this adverse turn of fortune as well as the progress foregoing and attending it. Prior to the British industrial revolution and the end of the preceding Little Ice Age, life throughout Western Europe was brutally difficult. Harsh environments with scarce resources forced European populations to compete with one another for survival and expansion. Unpleasant as this was, it laid the groundwork for the peaceful and prosperous industrial (and post-industrial) age that was to follow, the relaxed existential conditions of which enabled the development of specialized economic niches and complementary specialized cognitive skills, with the Flynn effect emerging as a consequence of the cultivation of the latter. Intergroup competition favored or selected for those populations highest in general intelligence (g) and intra-group altruism.

These traits are in fact foundational to advanced civilizations, as they promote innovation in all fields of intellectual endeavor. The implications for the future of the West are dire, making the authors' findings all the more important and worthy of serious attention.

COUNCIL FOR SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC STUDIES

P.O. Box 34143, Washington, D.C. 20043

(202) 266-9908; F (202) 371-1523 Email: socecon@aol.com

THE JOURNAL OF SOCIAL, POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC STUDIES

Spring & Summer 2022

Vol. 47 Nos. 1&2

The Journal of Social, Political and Economic Studies

Spring & Summer 2022

Vol. 47, Nos. 1&2

Measuring Tax Revenue and Tax Base Erosion: Evidence from Taiwan

Yu kun Wang and Li Zhang

The Situation of the Kurds after the Popular Revolution in Syria: 2011-2020

Yusra Alkhalailah, Ghaida Al-Biltaji, Atallah S. Al Sarhan

Lessons From the Subprime Years For the Covid Years

Jorge Vasconcellose Sá and Natália Teixeira

Is Climate Change Crisis a New Global Security Threat?

Evidence from the Quality of Government Dataset

Huong Le

Socio-Economic Impacts of Internally Displaced Persons

on Host Communities in District Bannu

Izhar Ul Hassan, Sami Ullah, and Khalid Mughal

Female Workers in the Indonesian Informal Sector

Ikhfan Haris

Within Economic Blocks, Countries and States Tend to Diverge

(Not Converge)

Jorge Sá and Ana Lúcia Luís

Evolution of the Relationship Between Incarceration

and the Labor Market in the United States, 1945-2016

Kerem Cantekin, Ceyhun Elgin and Adem Y. Elveren

Multilocus Genetic Analysis and the Assessment of Human Ancestry

Daniel A. Beach

Book Reviews

The Council for Social and Economic Studies